Rollover:

Unbelievable! The Three O'Clock are back, and if you can't see them at Coachella, catch them at The Glass House — one night only, for only $20.00!

Note:

The Three O'Clock, that incredible Paisley underground band, are back! You get to hear and see them BEFORE they hit Coachella 2013. So don't worry if you can't see them at the Coachella event — just be sure you score your tickets to their April 7th concert at The Glass House. This is for one night only! Get your tickets now, at $20. And you pay only a $1 fee. This is a band that has been sorely missed, with their trademark light, lyrical, jangly, compelling songs and high-register vocals. In the early-1980s, The Three O'Clock's bassist Michael Quercio coined the term Paisley Underground to describe the set of bands, including the Dream Syndicate, Rain Parade, Green On Red and the Bangles, who incorporated the chiming guitars of the Byrds and the Beatles into their pop songs with a psychedelic bent, and wore the clothes to match. After disbanding in 1988, each member of The Three O'Clock continued in his own musical career and now they're back, bridging the generations and playing hits that have moved their admiring fans for over two decades. Don't miss this very special night!
