Brace Yourself for the Coming Financial Tsunami...

Are You Prepared to Survive

The Devastating Demise of the U.S. Dollar?

I am! And I want to send you three Free Reports today—that will show you

- Exactly what to do to survive the coming economic Armageddon
- Exactly where to put your endangered money to protect and grow it!
- How to Prepare and Prosper...even in the wake of the Dollar's coming Death Spiral!

What I am about to tell you is nothing short of cataclysmic! You are going to read here about a “perfect storm” that is brewing at this very moment. It is ready to strike, given the “right” circumstances and manhandling—but strike it will. We just don't know exactly when.

Just one look at current news headlines tells you it's never gotten this bad. These are actual headlines! ...

- Dollar continues plunge as 'currency war' concerns linger...
- Putin Selling First EURO Bonds...
- China Reserves May Hit $2.5 Trillion...
- Regulators planning worldwide rules for large firms...
- 420 banks demand 1-world currency...
- Fed Expected to Resume Buying Assets...
- MORE Money Printing...

And there's absolutely no way out of it...only through it.

Very few are going to be ready to protect their hard-earned cash, and will get sucked into the financial maelstrom. And when they emerge, their money will very likely leave them all but dead broke—because it will be worth next to nothing!

The question I must ask you right now is...Are you going to be one of them?

The Clock Is Ticking

The U.S. Dollar is about to tank. Where will you be when it does? I will be in safe investment havens, and I want you to be in them as well! Because it's going to get mean out there, and your whole future is at stake.

Can you tell me where you and your money will be when (not if)—

- Rampant, unchecked spending in Washington leads to the worst tax imaginable—Hyperinflation?
- The value of the Dollar spirals down to 10%, 20% or 30% of where it is today?
- Nationwide runs on banks make those just prior to the Great Depression pale in comparison?
- No one will take your paper money anymore?

Hang on to your hat!

Hello. My name is John R. Jones. My company, ResourceReporter.com, points investors toward the Precious Metals and Energy sectors—the very best sectors for high-value return on investment. We believe that these are the best places for your money today—and in many cases they are posting gains of 100%, 200%, 400%...and more!

And in light of what's about to happen in America, this information couldn't come at a better time. You see...

A Nationwide Panic is About to Engulf the U.S.!

Unless you've been away from the news for the past two years, you know that a massive economic recession has hit the United States, like a devastating typhoon. The U.S. Dollar, long the symbol of America's strength and economic power, is quickly losing ground. Merely printed paper with little else to go on in terms of value, the Dollar is continuing its downward slide. Banks are closing at alarming rates—unheard of since the days of the Great Depression. In any event, we could be only days from a banking disaster of titanic proportions... literally. And the value of your hard-earned American money could disappear overnight.

But that doesn't have to be—not for you. I can help you out of the terrible financial pit that Americans are sliding into with the Dollar. But first, you need to know how this whole mess came to be.

How Currency Loses Value

When a nation trades off its native productive value in the name of greed, maximizing profits and saving very little money, it loses a good deal of its intrinsic value and resiliency. It also begins to lose its position in the world markets.

- At home, workers and the economy suffer. Jobs are lost and equity value in companies dwindles.
- When supply and demand for goods and services become unbalanced, markets lose ground because people buy less.
- Many companies go out of business as fewer goods are produced.

When that happens, that nation's currency can lose a good portion of its value. There are certainly other factors that lead to a currency's devaluation, and some are irreversible. But the end result always seems to be the same...that nation's bankruptcy.

But How Did It Ever Get This Bad?

Many factors have contributed to U.S. decline and the devaluation of the Dollar. But two events that took place in the second half of the 20th Century had a profound effect on two great nations—and changed world history forever.

U.S. President Richard Nixon was responsible for those two events, which occurred during his first term in office...

- The U.S. opened the door to relations with China in the late 1960s, which also set the stage for future trade and the sharing of technology between the US and China.
- And in August 1971, Nixon signed a law that removed the gold backing from the U.S. Dollar—reversing the historic Bretton Woods agreement of the 1930s, which had tied gold to the Dollar. On that day, the Dollar lost its safety, protection and stability.

The reason? There was no longer enough gold to go around, as there had been after WWII, and all the way into the Viet Nam war. But by 1971, the war had depleted U.S. gold reserves down to a level that caused the government to take remedial measures. The Nixon solution set a troubling precedent for currencies in the U.S. and around the world.

Today, because the Dollar is merely paper or "fiat" money, it has no intrinsic monetary value. The value accorded it today exists solely by virtue of its purchasing power—and that power is tied directly to two things:

- the balance of output of American goods and services, and
- the degree of confidence and value others give to it. Nothing else.

Americans are spending less today because of the recessive economy, and they're hoarding whatever Dollars they now can... and so are many major corporations, many of which are now "cash rich!" This condition results in less output and fewer purchases from American businesses.

Now add in many years' worth of overindulgence in credit spending. Americans have been paying down so much credit, they haven't been saving or investing as much—and that closes banks. Banks need deposits and investor involvement to stay in business or they risk failure. But there's more...

Quantitative Easing (QE) is Driving the Dollar Down

The U.S. central bank is a "reserve" commercial bank that has authority to lend money to the government, the country and other commercial banks. It has a monopoly on printing the nation's currency and coin as "legal tender" of the U.S. And when normal methods of controlling the monetary supply have failed, the central bank can invoke QE.

What the bank does is credit its own account with money from nothing. Then through a process called Open Market Operations, it buys assets like precious metals, government and corporate bonds, mortgage securities and other financial debt from other banks and financial institutions. These assets are deposited into its own accounts and give the bank excess reserves required to create new money. As we've seen with the U.S., a specific (quantitative) amount of money is printed—the objective being an "easing" of the debt burden on the banks it buys the assets from.

Today the Fed is talking about a second round of QE and a modest raise in the prime rate. Although these measures are designed to stimulate the economy, there's always a risk that QE may have little or no effect, except to continue inflating the currency. And you can tell how QE's been working up till now...

- The U.S. national unemployment rate stands at 9.6% and 14.8 million people collecting unemployment checks.

- Over $880 billion in stimulus money in 2008 didn't have much effect either, since over 2 million U.S. jobs have been lost since then!

Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke has voiced scores of economic opinions and predictions—nearly all of which foreshadowed the exact opposite result when each occurred! He also made promises that he routinely broke.

This one will live in infamy: “(The Fed) will Not monetize the debt.” (February 2010)

Soon afterward, he invoked Fractional Banking which allows the Fed to print money and lend it to the Central Bank. Bernanke went on to assure the U.S. that "...the Fed's printing of money won't lead to inflation." But he also said there would be no housing slump in 2006...and we know how that ended up!

It appears that the U.S. government will continue monetizing the huge 13-trillion-dollar U.S. debt as its solution to the massive recession in progress. They can't default on the debt or renegotiate it with the U.S.'s debtor nations—if they do, the bond market will collapse and so will the U.S. Dollar.

"Quantitative easing is not going to work. The currency fix is not going to work, especially because we're in a highly political season, seizing on a combination of bad economics and lethal politics. The U.S. has bi-lateral debt deficits with 90 countries. QE1 didn't work, QE2 didn't work...and QE12 won't work. The idea that you can defer all of this debt by some massive injection of liquidity is really wrong." - Stephen Roach, non-executive chairman at Morgan Stanley Asia.

Do You Really Trust This Guy?

Ben Bernanke has his hands on the U.S. money supply—the Fed has power to make policy decisions affecting the ultimate rise and fall of U.S. currency. With that in mind, would you trust a man who said this...

- “We expect moderate growth going forward...Overall the U.S. economy appears likely to expand at a moderate pace over the second half of 2007, with growth then strengthening...in 2008 to a rate close to the economy's underlying trend.” (2006)
- (Nine months into 2008, the bottom fell out of the U.S. economy.)
- "I don't agree with that (that there's a housing bubble)...we have never had a decline nationally in housing prices. I don't think it's going to drive the economy too far from its full employment path..." (2006)
- (Followed by a national decline in housing and home prices...of course!)

Investor Jim Rogers said, "The incompetence in Washington tells me it's time to abolish the Fed." He made the suggestion in March 2008, six months before the bottom dropped out of the economy, when he called for Bernanke's resignation and abolishing the Federal Reserve.

Prognosticator Peter Schiff said it this way, "There are no checks and balances if the government's wrong. If a business is wrong, they go bankrupt. If the government's wrong, they just get bigger. They appropriate more money! We owe the world trillions and all we do is reach for the printing press and print more. The rest of the world is dragging us around like we're dead weight."

Here are the other symptoms combining to deep-six the Dollar.

Massive Debt

U.S. debt is overwhelming. At $13.478 trillion, it is at its highest point ever in history, and climbing. Add to that a recession so deep right now that some are even calling it a depression.

How can that be? The major reason is rampant, irresponsible spending in Washington over the past three decades. Today, America is debtor nation to many other countries, including China and Japan. China tops that list as creditor, to the tune of over $868 billion.

Can't the Government Try Other Ways To Pay the Debt?

Congressional spending cuts would help stop the hemorrhaging of money. But they will not pay down existing debt. If the government raises the interest rate on the debt and makes the taxpayers pay those increases, the net effect drives the Dollar down even more by paralyzing consumer spending and confidence. The more taxpayers are taxed, the less they spend. It's a vicious circle.

Why Inflation Is Lethal

Within the last several years the U.S. has doubled the money supply. The U.S. has defaulted already on loan repayments, with the Fed $3 trillion behind—even at 0% interest rates. The long-term U.S. debt is actually over $100 trillion! The U.S. is so upside-down right now, financially, that if even at a 12% inflation rate, annual U.S. revenue couldn't even pay off the principal.

But watch out for the cancer that kills any economy...Hyperinflation!

At some point, three conditions have traditionally combined to cause runaway inflation:

- Higher, more frequent inflation cycles that unchecked, eventually become uncontrollable
- A significant increase in the money supply (QE and money printing)
- Continual downward pressure on the inflated currency's value

The main concern with inflation is that when prices begin to rise significantly, a run on spending will most likely occur. Literally millions of Americans will rush to spend the Dollars they have held back and hoarded because prices will have risen to great degrees. At that point, explosive inflation could occur.

It's Going to Get Scary

How can I say that with such certainty? Because history is repeating itself. Briefly let's cover those symptoms one more time.

- Declining value in an un-backed currency
- Failure of government to properly stimulate the national economy
- Rampant, unchecked spending
- Huge amounts of debt
- Massive paper money infusions into the economy
- Hyperinflation

These factors combined in Europe following World War I. In France and Germany, the governments began printing money to stimulate the economies, while hyperinflation set in. Pretty soon the franc and deutschemark were worth very little. I recall hearing tales from history—painting a bleak picture of poor German citizens taking an entire wheelbarrow-ful of their currency to buy just one loaf of bread!

On the one hand we could ponder how sad those times were for the Germans—yet the same thing is starting to happen with the U.S. Dollar—right in front of the world's eyes.

Oh...one other thing. I mentioned France. Well, when the French realized they were in deep weeds, they began buying gold. They understood that to have true, intrinsic value, any currency must be backed by something of equal or greater monetary value. And they chose a medium of value and exchange that's been used for thousands of years without question.

When a country's national debt and the money it owes to its creditors is more than it can pay off, that nation is in dire financial trouble. We know it as bankruptcy—and today, by any definition, the United States is bankrupt.

More Factors: World Markets and Competition

And not only are debt and spending out of control...

- The U.S. is losing its edge as a world producer to Asia.
- Nations such as China and India are aggressive in their quest for industrial growth and world market share in products sold. In fact, America is one of China's best customers! Americans can't seem to pass up the low-priced deals in gadgets and gizmos they can buy from Chinese companies.
- With a burgeoning Chinese economy, estimates predict a $123 trillion economy in China by 2040!

Since March 2008, the Dollar has been trading at its lowest level ever against currencies such as the euro, yen, pound, Swiss franc, Canadian dollar and Swedish krona. "Currency is on the outs," said Brian Taylor, a currency trader from Buffalo, NY. Current world monetary interests reveal their lack of confidence in the U.S. economy every time the Federal Reserve chairman comes out with a new report. Recent 2010 crises with the eurodollar and the economy of Greece only add to the nervousness and uncertainty.

Until the present time, nearly every major international currency has been pegged to the U.S. Greenback. But that has been changing rapidly! Right now, China and Europe are doing what they consider to be the safest thing—fleeing to safety and security...away from the Dollar.

Running Away From the Dollar

One long-standing myth about modern currency is that it is backed by the U.S. gold supply in Fort Knox—meaning currency could be traded to the U.S. government for the equivalent amount of gold bullion at any time. And at one point this was true. But since August 1971, the only real backing of the U.S. Dollar has been the confidence that others have placed in it.

Am I drawing a correlation here? I sure am. China, India, Europe and even Russia see the handwriting on the wall...with the high risk of being tied to a currency that could collapse without real value behind it—an American Dollar that bears little resemblance to the one they had originally pegged their own currencies to.

As the Dollar continues to lose buying power, many nations have begun placing greater confidence in the euro currency. Even Russia is distancing itself from the Dollar. Logic, national preservation and the need for true bartering power all combine to make the solution a simple one for these nations who are fleeing the Dollar. Buy gold!

China's Gold Rush

China has been buying gold from the IMF in astounding amounts—over 1,000 tonnes. Mainland China now ranks at No. 6 in the world in gold holdings, and is expected to continue increasing its reserves to dilute its US dollar asset holdings. Even the rural residents of China are caught up in the rush for gold.

And it's not only China. India, with its emerging economy, is buying gold bullion, and so is the central bank of the United Arab Emirates—in record amounts.

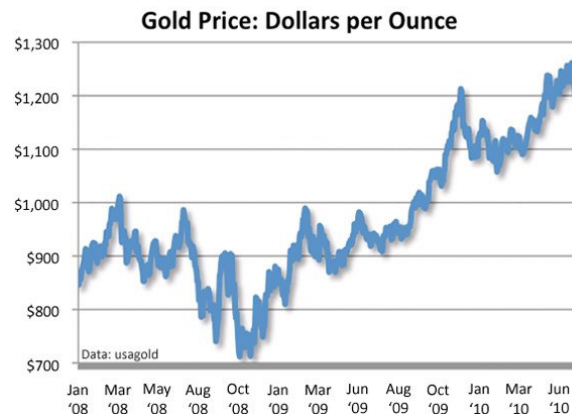

Where Is Gold Headed—Really?

Up. As I tell you this, Gold is soaring toward $1400 per troy ounce—an unprecedented, all-time record high. Barrick Gold's President and CEO Aaron Regent and other market watchers see it advancing to the $2000 mark in this decade.

Investor and financial commentator Jim Rogers recently told CNBC

- "Gold is going to go a lot higher over the next decade. It may slow down for a while because it's run up so dramatically here in the last few weeks. But gold's going to be much higher. Adjusted for inflation it should be well over $2,000 now. When I say something like it's going to 2,000 in 10 years, it's not a very dramatic statement given the state of the world. I'm sure it's a given."

If you look at gold prices from 2004 (in the $400+ range) and 2006 in the $600+ range) compared with today—you can see the effect the recession and global demand have had on the price. Gold has more than trebled its 2004 price! Gold, and all the precious metals for that matter, have plenty of reserve market support and momentum, both from a fundamental and technical standpoint!

The growing demand for gold—along with vast amounts of it flowing out of London to Dubai—will eventually result in a default on the obligation to deliver.

One of the effects of this will be vast increases in the price of gold. And what happens in a highly liquid market when everybody is buying? The price continues to increase even more from the market pressure. There is no doubt—now is the time to buy gold.

There are fabulous places for gold investment and there are places to definitely avoid! In my first free Resource Reporter Special Report, I will share two personal favorites for great gold investing! Click here now to receive your Report.

I know that you have just read a lot of very austere information—but it's not all bad news!

Of course I had to tell you the crucial, dire facts. But now, let me tell you the good news—about what you can do to profit as you've never imagined before. In markets that are growing steadily, are highly liquid and are well-funded. In “safe havens” for your money's growth and preservation...for today and for a long way down the road. So—

Let Me Tell You About 3 Places You Can Flee To Now, For Safety & Growth!

Gold. You've read a lot about it right here. Gold is the perfect store of value!

- ❖ It is negotiable in an insolvent economy.
- ❖ Its value is universally known and recognized.
- ❖ It is rare.
- ❖ You can't counterfeit it.
- ❖ It is consistently and significantly rising in price on world markets.
- ❖ It is a durable asset...and as such
- ❖ it easily appreciates when other mediums of exchange such as paper currencies—are devaluing.

The world supplies of gold, however, are limited. Most of it has already been mined...and China, the UAE and India are acquiring massive gold holdings. Supply will soon be overridden by demand. In Special Report - Part I, I will show you how to invest right now in this must-have monetary resource. I'll also give you my honest opinion as to where the fairest, most reputable gold buying deals can be found. You'll also learn what your best gold options are today.

And that's not all. I will also tell you about opportunities in other precious metals. (I'll give you a hint right now—Silver is up over $24 per ounce, and Platinum is nudging $1700 per ounce).

Energy (Oil & Gas) In light of concerns over America's finite petroleum reserves, new technologies are emerging in the Oil & Gas industry that will have a far-ranging economic impact on U.S. and global energy supplies. In Part II of my free Special Report I will "spill the beans" about the how and why of the most lucrative opportunities for growth in

- ❖ Exploration & Drilling
- ❖ Natural Gas
- ❖ Oilfield Equipment
- ❖ Refining (Hydrocarbon Processing)

And here's a sneak peek at what you'll find there...

- Recently a massive deposit of natural gas known as the Marcellus Shale was discovered and mapped. Investors and gas companies alike are pursuing estimates of 489 trillion cubic feet of natural gas residing there under the states of West Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York, Tennessee, Ohio and Kentucky.
- According to the information presented, drilling rigs, processing facilities and compressor stations are currently being designed and deployed to capture this rich energy source vital to America's demand.
- Indications are that the Marcellus shale is the largest unconventional gas reserve in the world.
- By 2020, it could yield 4 billion cubic feet per day, generate $13.5 billion in value and add 175,000 jobs per year.

I could glean several key moneymaking investments from this item alone...and they would stand your portfolio in very good stead!

Alternative Energy From Clean Energy ventures to advancements in Wind Power, Solar Power, Hydro, Geothermal, Nuclear, Clean Coal and R&D...you will find solid, profitable investments in companies found throughout this extremely varied sector.

- In Part III of my Special Report, I will show you three 3 key strategies
- You will learn how to prudently invest, what to look for in a company and
- Why the Alternative Energy sector is strategically positioned for growth greater than any other on the globe—truly the economic investment of our lifetime!

Let me share one "why" with you right now. According to the International Energy Agency, $26 trillion must be invested over the next twenty years to meet projected worldwide energy demand—with more than $10 trillion of that invested in alternative energy if the world is to avoid what the IEA referred to as "irreparable damage to the planet."

You will find winning investments in this sector, guaranteed! Join me as I share a lot of life-changing money facts today...in my Part III Special Report!

What I've just shown you is a mere sampling of the valuable information you'll receive in my 3 no-cost Special Reports, Rescue, Protect, Grow: Where to Invest Your Money Right Now, Before the Storm Hits – Parts I, II and III.

- In each Report I share specific, detailed, valuable information about each sector—how that sector is growing, where the newest innovations and developments are taking place—and what that means for long-term capital growth (and your capital growth!)
- Each detailed Report is 8 pages in length. You don't get a short synopsis of the sectors—but a real how-to-and-why "Investment White Paper."
- Along with the detailed information presented in each of my three Special Reports I will share at least two specific "opinions" on companies producing exponential growth. These will be rock solid opportunities for wealth generation and protection that deal specifically with each sector. Now...I'm not talking about a "couple of good stock picks"...I am going to divulge the Rock Stars of the Gold, Energy and Alternative Energy sectors.

Where do I invest my own money right now? I will give you the answers. But you can't get any of this incredible, life-changing data until you take the next step.

You've read a lot of heavy-duty news and information in this letter. But you and I both know history marches on—it doesn't wait for people to stop and mull their financial decisions over. The wise and the secure will be those who take action on what they've read and understood.

So please—let me get personal with you...because I'm very concerned for your financial future. It's time to ask yourself some questions if you haven't by now—and to make a few critical life decisions that will change the course of your life.

- What will you do if there is a nationwide banking collapse? In 2007, there were 45 bank failures in Georgia alone!

- What would you do if you drove to your bank or attempted to withdraw money online—but you couldn't? That's what happened with at least two banks in 2008 when customers came to withdraw money— but their banks had been shut down overnight by order of the Fed.
- What will you do if the Dollar loses another 20%, 30%, or more of its valuation in the next several months?
- What kind of buying power will your money have if one day you awaken to news of a nationwide financial meltdown?

I have those answers. They are in my reports! This is what you will also receive in them:

- ☑ You will receive real solutions and real opportunities—to free up your money to earn like it has never earned before.
- ☑ You will be able to do a complete money makeover and put your funds in “safe” places where the real value is.
- ☑ You will get specifics—not hyped-up government baloney or inflated numbers...like the ones you hear about when some stock guy calls you with the latest “great buy.”
- ☑ You will gain valuable knowledge that can allow you to easily grow your money 100%, 200%, 400% or more, in some cases!

...and you will have real peace of mind so that you can get on with the business of living—even if the financial bottom were to fall out of the U.S. economy overnight.

But you have to act now...

The Dollar will not wait for you to act, I promise. And neither will the soaring prices in the precious metals—or the increasing value of the fabulous energy picks we will divulge to you. These incredible reports are the Deal of the Century—so much valuable information, all at no cost to you!

But the cost could be astronomically high to you if you don't act. My friend, time is of the essence. Please don't sit on the fence—take action now and protect your future.

I'm Making It Ridiculously Easy for You to Change Your Financial Fortunes!

I have just revealed very timely, crucial information and pointed you toward viable, workable solutions to your dollar devaluation dilemmas. I have told you in absolutely clear, truthful terms how...and why...the U.S. economy is most surely teetering on the brink of disaster. No sugar coating—just the facts.

But I didn't stop there. I have also shown you how to solve this absolutely insane problem...by focusing on three "safe-haven" sectors where you can

- Use gold as a true hedge against the coming hyperinflation in the U.S.!
- Invest your money in places that are producing solid growth today and will continue to grow...long into the future!
- Observe and invest in alternative sectors that are enjoying exponential growth in emerging technologies at home, and around the globe.

Sadly, you and I also know that the vast majority of Americans will do little or nothing to prepare for this devastating financial Category 5 storm. But that's not you. Because you're reading this revealing information you understand the implications—and you're heading for financial high ground!

Even so, the choice is still yours. You can "go it alone"—that is, try to come up with your own best picks and soundest choices for investment—and the protection of your money's buying power into the future. And you may get burned...and then again you may not. In many cases, it could turn out to be a crapshoot.

Or you can do something so simple, yet so tried and true—so sensible—that the only real risk will be the moves you don't make to safeguard your financial future!
